BURNED THE STOCKADE

And Released One Hundred and Fifty Prisoners—Ten Miners Killed and the Country Greatly Excited.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 31.—The miners of the Coal Creek mine tonight took the law into their own hands. The stockade at the Tennessee mining company's plant was burned and 150 convicts were turned loose, given citizens' clothes and told to leave the country. The guards met the advance with firing and several miners fell. They had a force of sharp shooters in the back ground and after several of the guards had been hit they drew back and made a less prominent, but little less effective battle. They were overpowered, however, and soon the victorious miners had entered the enclosure and driven the guards into their quarters. In the quarters occupied by the convicts there was great activity. The men were willing enough to make a break and they got away as quickly as possible. They went singly and in groups, but quickly, until it was but a few minutes until the last of the 150 men had vanished in the woods. They were making tracks for the state line. The guards, however, were not going to give up so easily, but kept up a harrassing fire from Winchesters and did much execution. The miners lost, it is said, ten killed and twice as many wounded. In order to make the arrival of aid as slow as possible a small party of men had gone down the railroad each way and cut the wires, thus keeping all knowledge of the affair quiet until nearly midnight. When the trouble became known the owners of the mines began to search for new guards and they kept at this until they had roused the sheriff and a posse at midnight. Nothing has been heard from them and it is not known whether they reached Briceville at all. They arrived too late, however, if they did get there, for the flames had done much damage, having been communicated to the company's buildings. These were destroyed. Soon after the men at Briceville were set free the greater portion of the mob started for other mines near, with the intention of keeping up their work. No news of them has been heard.

A special from Clinton says: Labor Commissioner Allman arrived here at midnight from Briceville and was interviewed. He says the Tennessee company's stockade has been burned and 150 convicts released by miners, given citizens clothing and told to skip. The guards and miners are still fighting. He says the miners will go to the Knoxville, Tenn., company's plant next and repeat the dose. Then to Oliver Springs. Reports of firing can be heard in Clinton.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Oct. 31.—Governor Buchanan has been notified of the release of the convicts at Briceville and Coal Creek. At 10.30 a. m. the governor had not called out the militia and will take no action on the matter until this afternoon. The latest report says that 145 convicts were released at Briceville and 130 at Coal Creek. The miners have possession of the telegraph office at Coal Creek and no communication can be had by wire. Reports from Briceville state that the stockade was surrounded on all sides by miners, powder was placed under the foundation and the stockade destroyed. When the convicts secured their liberty they offered to help their liberators in an attack on the Chumlea's stockade at Thistle Creek. The guards at the latter place anticipated an attack and bon fires were lighted and a continual shooting of rifles was kept up in order to intimidate the miners. Later advices say that the stockade at Coal Creek was not burned, but the doors were battered down and the convicts released. The convicts assaulted the guards and wrested their weapons from them. But little resistance was offered and no bloodshed occurred. The affair was so sudden and unexpected and so well conducted that it gave strength to the belief that a strong and well organized secret society exists among the miners. Many of the miners have returned to their homes and affairs are quieting down considerably. It is not thought the militia will be called out.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 31.—The news of the burning of the stockades at Briceville and Coal Creek and the release by the attacking miners of the convicts has been fully confirmed. Governor Buchanan was officially advised of the trouble this morning, but up to noon he has not decided what he would do.

STILL STUBBORN.

The Chilian Government Does Not Recede from its Defiant Attitude.

SANTIAGO, Oct. 31.—The Chilian authorities show no disposition to recede from the defiant attitude which they assumed in their answer to the communication from the United States in regard to the assault on members of the crew of the United States steamship Baltimore. Pedro Montt, the representative of the provisional government at Washington, sent a dispatch yesterday urging the junta to adopt a conciliatory policy and to move with great caution, but his advice was apparently [illegible]. While the American [illegible] and other foreign residents fully recognize the gravity of the situation and are [illegible] of either and perhaps graver complications, the Chilian public appear to have no conception of it. The [illegible] the result is [illegible] published in the local papers. They are [illegible].

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—[illegible] have also been some developments which indicated that the Philadelphia and Atlanta will also leave for Chili as well as practicable. This will make seven vessels for Chilian service.

FAST TIME.

The Contestants in the Relay Bicycle Race Break All Former Records.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—The relay bicycle race against time, which is taking place today from Hartford to this city, is creating considerable excitement among the cyclists in this city. The men are carrying dispatches and the attempt is to prove the utility of the bicycle in army maneuvers and other services where a rapid courier is required.

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 31.—The start of the great relay race on bicycles from here to New York was made from in front of the Cyclist office at 5 o'clock this morning. The starters were J. M. Grant, jr., and Charles Wood. They were started by Joe Goodman, the editor of the Cyclist. Several bicyclists were present. Grant fell just this side of Berlin, but as Wood had the dispatch it did not delay the race. The riders in the bicycle race arrived at Berlin at 7.49, Meriden at 8.04, Wallingford at 8.32, North Haven at 9 and New Haven at 9.31.

MERIDEN, Conn., Oct. 31.—William Harting, of the Hartford Wheel club, arrived here from Berlin at 8.06, riding well at the finish. A crowd of 500 people witnessed the start of Frank F. Ives and J. E. Brainard, of this city, who made a flying start for North Haven. Charles H. Wood, of Hartford, who transferred the message at Berlin and rode to Meriden for a record, beat all records between Hartford and Meriden. His time was one hour and nine minutes.

A PASTOR'S CALL.

Rev. C. M. Schaaf, Well Known Here, Goes to Louisville, Ky.

Rev. C. M. Schaaf, of Huntington, who is well known in this city, his wife being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Casper Nebreiter, has received a call from Louisville, Ky., to serve as pastor for the German Reformed church in that city and will accept. His year will not expire at Huntington for about three months and he has not yet tendered his resignation but will likely do so soon, as he will probably remove to Louisville within the period of a few weeks. Although the change will accrue to him an increase of salary, his real object in accepting the call is for the purpose of improving Mrs. Schaaf's health.

Rev. Schaaf is a brilliant young minister and one of the most eloquent pulpit orators in his church. His charge at Louisville is an excellent one, and by the change he will be thrown into company with Rev. C. F. Kriete, formerly of this city, who now has charge of a Reformed church at Louisville. Revs. Kriete and Schaaf are graduates of the same college and very close personal friends.

"CAMPBELL WILL WIN"

Says Chairman Neal, "But Republicans May Capture the Legislature."

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 31.—Chairman Neal said yesterday in an interview: "The democrats have more than a fighting chance to re-elect Governor Campbell. The governor says he will win, and I believe he will, but we will give no figures. There are too many uncertainties in the contest. As to the legislature we are making no claims. The trouble in Hamilton county gives the republicans the advantage, but the democracy may swing into line there, and if they do we shall carry the legislature. I look for a large increase in the democratic vote in the rural districts, as the tariff views of Major McKinley are not popular with the farmers. The democratic organization is in good shape for effective work, and somebody may be surprised when the returns are in."

COMPARATIVE QUIET.

Follows Riotous Proceedings in Turbulent Cork.

CORK, Oct. 31.—The vigorous action of the authorities preserved comparative quiet during the night. With the exception of occasional scuffles and rows and then a lively duel with blackthorns, the night presented no exceptional scene. The Parnellites claim, however, that there will be a grand demonstration of their strength tomorrow and that if the McCarthyites interfere they will meet with a terrible thrashing. The McCarthyites also intend to have a meeting called chiefly by clergymen. They will be in a condition better than ever to deal with aggressive Parnellites. Mr. O'Brien has fully recovered from the shock which he sustained when he learned of [illegible] tended murder.

A RUINED TOWN.

The Pretty Village of New Baltimore Laid in Ashes—Loss Over $100,000.

NORTH BALTIMORE, Ohio, Oct. 31.—This place, in the center of the Wood county oil fields, was visited last night by the most disastrous conflagration in its history. Five years ago it was a small hamlet, but in a short time developed into a city of over 5,000 inhabitants, and was one of the most prosperous towns in the state. Located at a distance from an adequate water supply and studded with derricks that marked the locations of gas and oil wells, with many thousands of barrels of the inflammable material stored up within the confines of the town, a fire such as that of last night has long been feared. At about 12 o'clock the long expected calamity occurred and the blaze which started in an oil well just west of the main street of the town, soon gained such headway that the destruction of the entire place was threatened. The greater portion of the business centre is now in ashes. The blaze swept Main street, from the Baltimore and Ohio railroad north, to Broadway on the east side, destroying twenty-one business houses, including the Beacon newspapers, People's bank, post-office and some of the largest blocks in the place. On the west side of the street the fire destroyed thirteen business houses, including the Hotel Burke, a portion of the opera house and many three story buildings. The entire loss is estimated at $100,000. The town is almost without fire protection, and help was summoned from Fostoria, but the scarcity of water rendered the work of the firemen almost useless. Thirteen residences were also burned.

DO WE WANT HAWAII?

The Island Will Fall Either to the United States or England.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 31.—Honolulu advices state that the arrival there of news from the United States concerning the fatal illness of the queen and the prospects of a revolution in the island, created a great sensation and within half an hour after the steamer from San Francisco brought the newspapers none could be purchased at any price. Dr. Trousseau, the queen's physician, to satisfy the government made a public denial of the reports, but it is said he does also deny. But the queen lies heart disease. There is little change in the situation at present, although the trouble will surely come upon the death of the queen. The presence of American war ships and American influence could probably not prevent the formation of a republic. In case the republic failed the people would clamor for annexation to the United States or to become a dependency of great Britain, whichever diplomat of the two representatives, English or American, proved himself the most diplomatic and clever for his country the most coveted prize of Hawaii. A good deal will depend upon which foreign representative would have the largest navy backing at the time. Stevens, the American minister, is no match for Wodehouse, the English minister, in intrigue, in tact and cunning, but Admiral Brown, who is familiar with the situation here, is more than a match for both of them.

BLISSFULLY UNITED.

Lieutenant Schwergin and Miss Mary Elliott Made One.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 31.—Miss Mary Elliott, daughter of Wm. H. Elliott, was married at noon today to Lieutenant Rennie Pierre Schwergin, of the United States Navy, by the Right Rev. Isaac Lea Nicholson, the newly consecrated Bishop of Milwaukee, who is a brother in law of the bride, assisted by Rev. R. H. Payne, at Mount Calvary Episcopal church. Miss Elliott is one of the most popular members of Baltimore's society. Lieutenant Schwergin is the great grandson of Marshal Von Schwergin, who was a field Marshal of Frederick the Great. The lieutenant was executive officer on the Thetis during that vessel's expedition to Alaska. The home of the family has been in New York state for several generations.

A HUSKY VOICE

Compelled Ex-Speaker Reed to Cancel His Engagements.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 31.—The republican county central committee received word from Akron this morning to the effect that ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed was suffering with a bad cold and would not be able to speak here tonight. Mr. Reed tried to make a speech at Akron last night, but his voice proved so husky after he had talked a few minutes that he was forced to excuse himself and retire to his room. His condition is not considered serious and he has simply cancelled his engagements for today.

THOUSANDS KILLED.

Japan Visited by One of the Worst Earthquakes Ever Known—Over 20,000 People Lost.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Advices just received from Hiogo, Japan, report a terrible earthquake as having on Wednesday last destroyed the towns of Nagoya, Gifu and Osaka. All the public buildings and most of the smaller structures in those places were thrown down. In Nagoya, one of the finest cities of the empire, fire broke out and completed the work of destruction. It is estimated that not less than 4,000 human beings lost their lives. In the vicinity of Hiogo many vessels are reported wrecked. During the disturbances the waters of the lakes in the surrounding country were violently agitated. Nagoya felt and escaped the effects of the earthquake, but the town of Kobe suffered comparatively little damage. The various wagon roads are blockaded by immense heaps of debris, and railroad traffic is entirely suspended. Owing to the complete prostration of telegraph lines full details of this terrible calamity cannot be ascertained.

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 31.—The lowest estimate of the loss of life throughout the Empire is 20,000.

EGAN WILL RETIRE

As Minister to Chili—Ill Feeling Toward America.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—President Harrison insists on an immediate conclusion of the Chilian negotiations and refuses to recall Egan.

A communication was received from Minister Egan this morning indicating no abatement of the ill feeling towards this government. Egan has prepared to leave the country and thinks his retirement may be essential for the preservation of the lives of Americans.

Stephen B. Elkins will be appointed secretary of war when Mr. Proctor retires.

TOPPLED OVER.

A Passenger Coach Thrown Into a Ditch, Injuring Several Persons.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Oct. 31.—A disastrous wreck occurred on the Ultima Thule, Arkadelphia and Mississippi railroad, a short line running from this point 140 miles west into Dallas county. Superintendent Jack Weed jumped from the coach as it left the rails but was caught under the car as it rolled down the embankment and crushed to death. Rev. Porter Henning and his little grandson, of Dallas; H. A. Hamilton and other passengers received injuries more or less serious though not fatal. The cause of the wreck was a sliver single of a rail, which caught the flange of a wheel while the train was moving at a slow rate of speed and made it ride over the rail and into the ditch.

A Great List of Attractions at the World's Museum.

Tonight closes one of the most successful weeks in the history of the World's museum. For the coming week an unusually fine list of attractions has been secured, including Nolle Oleo, the Grecian beauty, Professor Rose's school of educated birds, which is a show by itself well worth the price of admission, Ballerena, the feeder on live; Punch Hayes and his wooden headed family and numerous other features. The first three nights of next week will be presented the most popular play of modern times, "The Two Orphans," with representation of River Seine and other realistic scenes. Owing to the big success of "Our Shop Girls," it was played all week, necessitating the holding of this play for this week. Last three nights, the central comedy drama "Hidden Hand," or a New York Waif.

IT must be manifest to any close observer that the time is ripe for a new national bird in this great and glorious land. The eagle, as has been said before, does not represent us and should not be permitted to perch upon our banners. THE reappearance of the train-wrecker is not surprising. He will continue to reappear until legislation in all the States furnishes the appropriate penalty for his offense. A man has just been arrested in Pennsylvania for trying to wreck a passenger train with dynamite. On looking over his record it is found that he was imprisoned a few years ago for blowing up a train in that State, and causing the death of several passengers. Here is the case of a train-wrecker who was not reformed. If the capital penalty is ever justifiable, it certainly is in cases of men like this one.

DIED IN CONVULSIONS.

Miss Katie Kilander Succumbs Suddenly in This City—Deaths and Funerals.

Miss Kate Kilander, who conducted a millinery establishment on Maumee road, died very suddenly at 5 o'clock last evening. The young woman was almost a stranger in this city, having lived here but a month or two. Yesterday morning she left her boarding house for the store in apparently good health. Shortly after reaching the store she complained of a pain in her head, but continued her work all morning. After dinner she suffered in the same manner and took a short walk in the hope that the exercise and fresh air would relieve her, but it only added to her suffering. When she returned to the store she was seized with convulsions and fell to the floor. Drs. Stemen and Hetrick were summoned, but their efforts to restore her to consciousness were of no avail and convulsion followed convulsion until 7 o'clock when death came to her relief. The deceased was the daughter of Squire Samuel Kilander, of Huntington, and was twenty eight years old. She came to the city two months ago and established herself in the millinery business at 106 Maumee road, boarding with Mrs. C. Johnson, at 507 East Washington street. The father of the deceased arrived this afternoon and the remains will be shipped home this evening.

Mrs. Henry Brandt, of 152 Hayden street, died at 1 o'clock this morning, of bronchial catarrh. Her age was about sixty years. A husband and several children survive her.

Mrs. Thomas McNearney, of 66 McClellan street, died of abscess last night at the age of sixty-four years. She leaves two daughters and one son.

The funeral of Jacob Schiller will be held at Huntertown at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The funeral of Margaretha Zockraf will take place from the house at 1 p. m. and a half hour later from the St. Mary's Catholic church tomorrow afternoon.

The funeral of Mr. H. J. Ashwill occurs tomorrow at 2 p. m. from the residence, No. 102 East Main street, Rev. Moffat officiating. The pall bearers will be George H. Wilson, E. T. Williams, J. P. Evans, S. B. Bond, E. H. McDonald and M. E. Woodward. Mrs. Ashwill's death was caused by gall stones and not by cancer.

Last sabbath, Mr. H. C. Diffenderfer, of Aboite, one of the pioneers of Allen county, quietly passed away, and was buried on Tuesday, the 27th inst. Mr. Diffenderfer has been a citizen of Allen county for fifty years, and was in the seventy-fifth year of his life.

The following deaths were reported to the city undertakers for the week ending today:

Margaretha Zockraf, 51 years, typhoid fever; Kittie Kilander, 27 years, convulsions; Mrs. Thomas McNearney, 64 years, general debility; John A. Foster, 39 years, intussusception of bowels; Reuben J. Bradick, 3 years, pneumonia; Ross Yoder, 8 months, brain trouble; Addie W. Ash, 45 years, stomach trouble; Jacob D. Sechler, 55 years, Bright's disease; John H. W. Sheeler, 74 years, dropsy; Mrs. Henry Brandt, 59 years, bronchial catarrh.

BOARD OF CHARITIES.

Extension of the School for Feeble-Minded Proposed.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 1.

The Board of State Charities held its annual meeting today. It transacted considerable routine business, such as passing upon bills, and considering the annual report of its proceedings. Secretary Johnson gave a detailed statement of a number of cases of persons rejected from public charitable institutions because of the difficulty in classifying them.

One instance here will do for a type of those cases. Patsy Craycraft, of Sullivan county, was refused admission to the insane hospital because she was declared to be feeble minded, and was refused admission to the school for feeble-minded because the authorities there declared her insane. So she had to be sent back to the Sullivan county poor house. After considering a number of similar cases the board decided to recommend that a custodial department be added to the school for feeble-minded where such unfortunates as Patsy Craycraft may be provided for.

The board also will recommend that woman physicians be employed for the women's wards in the insane hospitals as far as possible. This recommendation is being based upon observations reported by Secretary Johnson. The board will visit the state institutions at an early day. The financial report showed that of the appropriation of $1000 for the board's use for the year, $301 had been expended [illegible].

... and the Indian Territory. Besides these principal streams there is the Atchafalaya, which leaves the Red River not far from its junction with the Mississippi and flows to the Gulf, thus forming one of the so-called mouths of the Mississippi. Instead of improving navigation the Atchafalaya impedes it, for whenever both the Mississippi and the Red rivers are low, the latter discharges its flow through the Atchafalaya and an immense mud bar forms between the waters of the Mississippi and those of the Red. The Atchafalaya itself spreads out as it approaches the Gulf, into a broad and shallow bayou. If the engineers could cut off this troublesome offshoot altogether the bank at the mouth of the Red River would soon be a thing of the past, for its natural flow is strong and deep. Experience has shown, however, that seasons sometimes when ... the turbulent Mississippi is a factor. In the spring its floods roll up the Red River and make a great river of the Atchafalaya.

SURPRISES AT A LONG ISLAND POULTRY FARM.

Where the Thermometer Rules Thousands of Birds Within Call, but Few in Sight—In the Brooding House.

[illegible]

"Sandacre," the country seat of E. B. Colgate, on the outskirts of the village of Quogue, L. I., within sight and sound of the blue Atlantic, is not only one of the most famous and representative of modern poultry farms. It is famous because of its size and its varieties of fancy fowl, representative because every innovation and improvement is brought into play within its boundaries. Once upon a time there was a farm on the New Jersey sands that far excelled it. But now that Jersey chicken settlement has handed over its glories and "Sandacre" reigns ... supreme at least.

The chick's promotion to the secondary brooding house depends mainly upon the weather. It is ordinarily a matter of three or four weeks. The secondary brooding house has twenty rooms, each ... and open air "runs" ... separated from each other and the outside world by screens of wire netting higher than a man's head. Fifty chicks are placed in each room instead of one hundred, which is the rule in the other houses. Here the young fowl first feels the responsibilities of life. He is deprived of artificial heat and has a broad field to run and scratch in.

But the poultry village is not complete. There is a tool and work shop, a ... house, a building for surplus birds, half a dozen small brooding houses with large yards attached, and the duck buildings down on the edge of Quogue Bay, with a duck pond that is a veritable Southern Sea close at hand. The ducks, however, are unimpressed. They have a large yard all to themselves in the midst of the poultry's domains, and in the heat of the day it is a pretty picture, a flock of fifty or more of a glossy, glistening white, huddled in the shade of an upright bough arbor of pale brown, with the sparse green grass of the sandy soil as a frame.

They are quite unconscious of their end, of course. And yet the chopping block stands in that very yard. They have been driven up from the water's edge especially for decapitation. The season of the markets has now come upon them, and from fifty to a hundred are killed each week. But this is but a drop in the bucket for a duck yard producing two or three thousand a year.—New York Telegram.

SELF-MURDERERS.

NOTED PEOPLE IN ALL AGES WHO COMMITTED SUICIDE.

Boulanger and Balmaceda had Many Celebrated Predecessors—Samson the First on Record—Suicide a Fine Art in China.

Boulanger and Balmaceda, each of whom played for high stakes and committed suicide when the game was lost, had many noted predecessors. From the days of the Roman Empire down to the present time men who had staked their all and lost have capped the climax of their defeat by self-destruction. Rather than endure disgrace they have acted as their own executioners. Balmaceda, the world's dictator of Chili, shot himself when convinced that escape from the victorious insurgents was impossible.

Boulanger, after making a brilliant record as a soldier in Algiers and in the Franco-Prussian war, and being idolized by his people, aspired to overturn the Republic and found an Empire, of which he would be head. A traitor to his country and branded as a thief, he was outlawed. When at last the woman who was his companion in exile died, he ended his strange career by shooting himself on her grave.

It is only a few months since Prince Rudolph of Austria and Marie Vetsera ended their lives in a manner that shocked the entire world. In the days when Romans believed it a disgrace to be killed by a foe in battle suicides were common. Cato stabbed himself rather than live under the despotic reign of Cæsar, and when Themistocles was ordered to lead the Persians against his country men he took poison.

Hannibal and Mithridates poisoned themselves to escape being made prisoners. Samson was the heroic suicide of the Scriptures, for, in order to be revenged on his enemies, he pulled down the temple in which they were reveling and perished with them. Many of the noted suicides of history are due to the philosophy of heroism rather than insanity.

Zeno, the founder of the Stoics, lived until he was ninety-eight. Then, when he fell one day and put his thumb out of joint, he decided that he had lived long enough, so he repaired to his dwelling and hanged himself. Homer is said to have hanged himself because he could not solve the fisherman's riddle. Terentius drowned himself because he had lost his translated comedies. Brutus threw himself on his sword, Lycurgus took poison and Nero cut his throat.

In China suicide has been a fine art for several centuries. If a Mandarin is guilty of misconduct he is requested to put himself out of the land of the living. There is a distinction, too, in the manner in which the Oriental may die. If he is of exalted rank, and entitled to wear the peacock feather, he is privileged to choke himself to death with gold leaf.

This is regarded as a distinguished manner of ending life. If the Mandarin is only of the rank that is entitled to wear the red button he must be content with strangling himself with a silken cord. Such are the distinctions of caste. One of the most remarkable cases of suicide was that of the King of Calabar on the west coast of Africa.

The king was attacked by a Mohammedan force, and, finding resistance impossible, he assembled his family and principal officers, and after addressing them and intimating his determination never to accept Mohammedanism, and inviting those who did not agree with him to go away, he applied a light to a large quantity of gunpowder collected for the purpose and blew into atoms the palace and all who were in it.

Suicides among the aristocracy in England are rather numerous. The suicide of the Duke of Bedford in January last shocked society circles of both continents. He was one of the largest landed proprietors in England, immensely wealthy and was seventy-two years of age. Lying on a sick bed, from which he had no promise of immediate recovery, he succumbed to the agony of the moment and sought relief in death. The fact that it was a suicide was carefully concealed from the newspapers, but the secret leaked out after the body had been cremated. Lord Congleton, who was Mr. Parnell's great-uncle, hanged himself in 1842. In the same year the Earl of Munster shot himself in the head. In 1869 Lord Clonenrry, the last of his house, jumped from a window and broke his neck.

In 1873 the last Earl of De la Warr drowned himself, and in 1876 Lord Lyttleton, the insane brother-in-law of Gladstone, escaped from his keepers, threw himself off the staircase of his own house and was killed.

A story of suicide in which sentiment is mingled is that of Prince Baudouin, heir to the throne of Belgium. The youthful Prince loved beneath his station, and finding that love could never be realized, sought peace in the eternal silence of the grave.

Commercial disaster to any member of the Rothschild family is as great a disgrace as crime is to any other family. This was illustrated by the recent attempts of Baron Gustav de Rothschild to end his existence. His attempt at self-destruction followed close upon his loss of $8,000,000 on the London market. The attempt was a failure, and in that respect resembled his speculation. His was not the first affair of the kind in the Rothschild family. Baron James de Rothschild, crazed by ill luck, some time ago blew out his brains in the presence of his mother.

Only last May Lord James Edward Sholto Douglass, brother of the Marquis of Queensbury, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor. He had been traveling from Ireland during the night and behaved in such a strange manner that the railroad officials ordered one of their employes to accompany him to London. Upon arrival in that city Lord Douglass put up at a hotel, and, when the attendant was not looking, he cut his throat. The tragic death of Lady Brassey, who plunged into the sea from her yacht while suffering from fever, will be long remembered. She was one of the most ambitious of women and remarkably talented. When she jumped overboard her poor husband dived after her, and it was with some difficulty that he was rescued from sharing her fate.

Suicides are common among defaulters as preferable to facing the charge of dishonor and trying to live down the record. Politicians smarting under the sense of defeat have ended all with a bullet. Disappointed lovers by the score take their lives when jilted by the objects of their choice, and so the category runs. Disappointment of every character has prompted all kinds of people to end this brief existence with a bare bodkin.—[New York Recorder.

A Sweet-Smelling Disinfectant.

A very pretty form of disinfectant is being introduced in sick rooms in Australia, in the form of the green branches of eucalyptus. The reputation of the eucalyptus as an absorbent of malaria, and as an antidote in fever cases is well established, and for some time its effect as a disinfectant in sick chambers has been carefully watched.

Dr. Cutgraven states, after twelve months' trial, that in cases of scarlet fever, if the branches be placed under the bed, the bedding undergoes thorough disinfection, the volatile vapor penetrating and saturating the mattress and every other article in the room. The vapor is also said to have a beneficial effect upon phthisical patients, acting not only as an antiseptic, but as a sedative and to some extent, as a hypnotic.—Philadelphia Press.

A MOHAMMEDAN MOSQUE.

Visit to an Oriental House of Worship in Cairo.

A commission has been appointed for the preservation of the monuments of Arabian art, and recently, therefore, many mosques are finding scaffolding in place, and a general dismantlement. One can only hope for the best as much the same spirit in which one hopes when one sees the beautiful old front of St. Mark's, Venice, gradually encroached upon by the new restorers. But in Cairo at least, the work of repairing goes on very slowly; three hundred mosques, probably, out of the four hundred still remain untouched, and many of these are adorned with a delicate beauty which is unrivalled. I know no spot so enchanting as a search through the winding lanes of the old quarters for those gems of Saracenic taste, which no guide-book has as yet chronicled, no dragoman discovered. The street is so narrow that your donkey fills almost all the space; passers-by are obliged to flatten themselves against the walls in response to the Oriental adjurations of your donkey-boy behind: "Take heed, O maid!" "Your foot, O child!" Presently you see a minaret; there is always a minaret somewhere; but it is not always easy to find the mosque to which it belongs, hidden, perhaps as it is, behind other buildings in the crowded labyrinth. At length you discover a door with a dab or two of the well-known Saracenic honeycomb-work above it; instantly you dismount, climb the steps, and look in. You are almost sure to find treasures, either fragments of the pearly Cairo mosaic, or a wonderful ceiling, or gilded Kufic (old Arabic) text inscriptions and arabesques, or remains of the ancient colored glass which changes its hue hour by hour. Best of all, sometimes you find a space open to the sky, with a fountain in the centre, the whole surrounded by arcades of marble columns adorned with hanging lamps or rather the bronze chains which once carried the lamps, and with suspended ostrich eggs—the emblems of good luck.

One day, when my donkey was making his way through a dilapidated region, I came upon a mosque so small that it seemed hardly more than a base for its exquisite minaret, which towered to an unusual height above it. Of course I dismounted. The little mosque was open, but as it was never visited by strangers, it possessed no slippers and without coverings of some kind it was impossible that unsanctified shoes such as mine, should touch its matted floor; the bent, ancient guardian glared at me fiercely for the mere suggestion. One sees sometimes even in 1890 in the eyes of the old men sitting in the mosques the original spirit of Islam shining still. Once their religion commanded the sword; they would like to grasp it again, if they could. It is suggested that the matting might, for a baksheesh, be rolled up and put away, as the place was small. But the stern old keeper remained inflexible. Then the offer was made that so many piasters—ten (that is fifty cents)—would be given to the blind. Now the blind are sacred in Cairo; this offer, therefore, was successful; all the matting was carefully rolled and stacked in a corner, the three or four Muslims present withdrew to the door, and the unbeliever was allowed to enter. She found herself in a temple of color which was incredibly rich. The floor was of delicate marble, and every inch of the walls was covered with a mosaic of porphyry and jasper, adorned with gilded inscriptions and bands of Kufic text; the tall pulpit, made of mahogany-colored wood, was carved from top to bottom in intricate designs, and ornamented with odd little plaques of fretted bronze; the sacred niche was lined with alabaster, turquoise, and gleaming mother-of-pearl; the only light came through the thick glass of the small windows far above, in downward-falling rays of crimson, violet and gold. The old mosaic work of the Cairo mosques is composed of small plates of marble and of mother-of-pearl arranged in geometrical designs; the delicacy of the minute cubes employed, and the intricacy of the patterns, are marvelous; the color is faint, unless the turquoise has been added; but the glitter of the mother-of-pearl gives the whole an appearance like that of jewelry. Upon our departure five blind men were found drawn up in a line at the door. It would not have been difficult to collect fifty.—[Harper's Magazine.

Mokanna the Veiled.

The veiled prophet was not a creation of mere fancy, but a genuine historic character of the eighth century. His name was Snakim Ben Allah, but he called himself Mokanna the Veiled. Having lost one eye from an arrow wound, he wore a thick veil to conceal the deformity, and laid claim to be an incarnation of the Deity. He had many followers in Arabia, and soon possessed himself of a large part of that country, and was acknowledged by a number of cities. His influence was retained by many devices, such being his skill in magic and legerdemain that his tricks passed for miracles.

Troops were sent against him by the Caliph Mahadi, his armies were defeated in the field, and he was besieged in a small fortress in the south of Arabia. Finding success impossible and deeming escape hopeless, he poisoned his attendants in a banquet and leaped into a well or cistern which had been partly filled with destructive acids. When the conquerors forced a way into the castle they searched in vain for him or his body, the latter having been entirely dissolved by the corrosive fluids. The secret was discovered by the confession of one who had beheld the preparations for suicide; but in some parts of Arabia there are still persons who believe that Mokanna ascended to heaven. —Chicago Herald.

China's Postal System.

A writer in a Shanghai newspaper recently, describing the Chinese postal system, observes that China has never considered the conveyance of the correspondence of the people as a necessary function of government. This is provided for by postal establishments, which are to be found in every town of any size, and Europeans in the interior who have to use them report favorably of the system and repose considerable confidence in it. It offers some advantages even over Western postal systems. All letters carried are practically registered and the contents insured to the full value without extra fee and great latitude is allowed in regard to weight. Letters need not be stamped beforehand, the rule is to keep running accounts with customers, which are settled monthly.

A Handy Measure.

It is reported from England that a very ingenious device for measuring distances has been "invented" by an English firm. It is a small wheel combined with an apparatus that registers the number of revolutions. By running the wheel along a wall, or other surface to be measured, a glance at the dial will show at once how many feet and inches have been traversed. It is a very useful instrument, doubtless, but its novelty seems questionable as it is remembered that an implement of exactly the same nature has been in use in every wheelwright shop "since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary" to measure the circumference of wheels.—New Orleans Picayune.

MILLIONS AT HIS FEET.

MR. SEARLES SUCCESSFULLY WOOED THE WIDOW.

He Then Proceeded to Lavish Her Wealth in the Most Romantic and Luxurious Fashion—The Great Will Contest—Timothy, the Adopted Son.

Reads Like a Romance.

The history behind the great Hopkins-Searles will case is a romance of itself. The wealthy Widow Hopkins met Searles, a poor frescoer who had been employed to do work in her home, became infatuated with him to such an extent that before the end of the year she implored the apparently reluctant suitor to marry her, and, as an inducement, laid her millions at his feet. Searles was evidently awake to the opportunity thus given to gain sudden and immense riches, and the marriage that had scarcely been solemnized before he began to display his newly acquired wealth in the most lavish manner. This was entirely satisfactory to Timothy, the adopted son, until Mrs. Hopkins-Searles in her will at her death bequeathed the whole fortune to Searles. Then Timothy Nolan-Hopkins-Searles arose to enter an objection, and persons to whom thirty millions of dollars is a fairy tale have since watched this grabble for gold with a good deal of interest.

Men and women marvel that a woman of so much sense as Mrs. Hopkins could consent to deed away her property so lavishly unless for the very highest of reasons. It is a plot fit for Wilkie Collins to have traced.

GATE OF THE METHUEN HOUSE.

Years ago Searles was a poor boy in Methuen, and he wasn't liked by the other boys in the town. He was surly and self-opinionated, so the boys thought, and they made things unpleasant for him. In consequence, Searles was always despised by the town-people of Methuen, and has endeavored at every opportunity to show his contempt for the inhabitants. Terry, Nevins and other townspeople gave costly monuments and buildings, but Searles wouldn't mend the town pump if his neighbors were dying of thirst. However, he "showed off," as children say, and erected a gorgeous mansion with fifty acres about it to make the Methuen crowd jealous. Of course he took pride in dazzling other Massachusetts towns with the fabulous riches of his doting wife; but into the Methuen spite he put an amount of style that shows a spark of genius.

High walls were set to gird the place and guards kept out intruders. The main entrance is flanked with Corinthian columns imported from Italy, but it has never been used save on one occasion. This gorgeous marble affair was intended for an entrance to the town, just because Mr. Searles is a decorator and has romantic ideas. His notion was to make an approach to the town through a park with a grand archway, something like the style in which a mediaeval town would indulge. But Methuen is a plain, every-day Massachusetts community that has hardly lost any of its Puritanical notions. The townspeople decided that they did not want to masquerade in this gaudy archway. Searles, in a huff, put it at the entrance to his own domain. Mrs. Searles drove under it once on her return from Europe the last time, and since then it has been closed.

A description of Searles' luxury reads like a chapter in the "Arabian Nights." The Methuen place of fifty acres is a network of paths leading through miniature lakes and ever-playing fountains. Trees and shrubs from every clime are arranged in such a manner as to render the landscape a Garden of Eden.

The splendid house, built in the style of a French chateau—Searles' favorite pattern—stands on an elevation, and, strange to say, surrounds the very cottage in which Searles was born.

TOWN WHERE MRS. SEARLES' REMAINS NOW LIE.

As if to complete the illusion, the man's aged mother still resides there, surrounded by every attention that wealth can provide. Yet her simplicity of life and carelessness of luxury fills her ancient townspeople with wonder.

Searles is fond of servants, and his endeavors to divert his aged wife were unique. For instance, he planned a grand [illegible] last July [illegible] of her birthday, when [illegible] of the trees in the park.

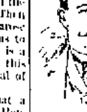

A huge tower had been erected in the park, and to it was a [illegible] a minaret had been set at the top. An elaborate orchestra had been imported from Boston, consisting of a hundred musicians. On the evening of Independence Day last Mrs. Hopkins-Searles stepped out upon a balcony overlooking the park, and then and there the lofty tower rang out to a magnificent chime of bells that rang out upon the air song after song in honor of the old lady's presence. Then fireworks shot up into the starlit sky and the electric lights blazed forth.

The old lady stood on the platform a few minutes, and then, with a sad smile upon her lips, was assisted back to her sick bed. She never rose from it again.

have been indicted for an attempt to burn the Daviess County (Ind.) Court House, and the next Grand Jury of the county will indict the defendants on a still more serious charge under the laws of Indiana—to wit, the burning of official records. County Auditor J. C. Lavalle was at one time one of the most popular men in his part of the State, not only with his own party but with his political enemies as well. No man had a brighter future than he had a few years ago. Everything which he turned his attention to seemed to succeed, and he had the confidence of every one who knew him. But it seems that this confidence led him into a terrible trap. The respect which the public had for him enabled him to commit felonies unsuspected, but one crime seemed to give him an appetite for another, and the popular officer worked deeper and deeper into the mire. RAINMAKER MELBOURNE.

The Alleged Wizard—Wants to Sell His Invention to the Government.

Rainmaker Melbourne's successes in the far West have been widely advertised. "Everybody believes in Melbourne," wrote a Goodland correspondent of the Kansas City Star a few days ago. "The committee of citizens who made the new contract with him by which rain is to be produced, has already evolved a gigantic scheme by which rain will be precipitated at regular intervals during May, June and July of 1892.

"Melbourne preserves his secret well. He refuses to say how he hit upon his discovery and whether a knowledge of chemistry assisted him in his experiments. The most information he will vouchsafe is that his series of experiments cost only from $100 to $700. He has no faith in the Dyrenforth methods, which, he claims, have been tried in Australia.

"My only object," said he recently, "in giving these experiments is to force the government to take an interest in them with a view to selling my secret. I consider Kansas a good field in which to operate."

"The rainmaker admitted that a scheme had been submitted to him for making rain twice a month over a given territory in northwestern Kansas. The season in which the drought is most keenly felt in this section of the State is the late spring and early summer. After it has been demonstrated that Melbourne can produce rain under the conditions which apply to this altitude and climate, a contract will be entered into by which rain will be guaranteed over a limited territory once every two weeks during May, June and July."

PALMER'S GREAT HOBBY.

Where the World's Fair President Has Taste of His Choice.

It is a fair one, viewed, a living picture of suburban life in its most attractive phases, this log cabin, the summer home of the Hon. T. W. Palmer, ex-Minister to Spain, and the soul's and general President of the World's Fair. Next to the Spanish table, the chief [illegible] found on another continent, this is the most valued of his possessions. Here he forgets for a time the turmoil of public life and becomes, as he loves to call himself, a too-cultivated farmer.

T. W. PALMER.

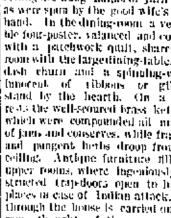

The farm and cabin are situated on Woodward avenue, about six miles from the center of the city of Detroit. It is a pleasant drive along the platted but only partially occupied future residence part of the city, which the associations of early years have made the Mecca of his wanderings. From Woodward avenue the cabin is reached by a maple-lined driveway skirted to the right by tiers of natural woods, the foliage a perfect study of beautiful coloring, while on the left a willow-fringed stream

Sparkles out among the fern
To bicker down the valley.

A rail fence incloses the lawn, a rustic gate opens the way to the well-house, where an old-time bucket gives mute invitation to drink, and who could refuse a draught from such a poet-honored source.

A soft, sloping carpet-like sward slopes from the house to the river. The house is a veritable log house, built in colonial style, and in all the details carefully carrying out the characteristics of the time when our forefathers loyally cried out, "God bless the good Queen Anne." The large front door, divided across the center and opening with a latch, the diamond-paned windows, the water barrels, the logs lying near the door and suggesting great bumpers of the juice of the apple, all belong to the past. From the benches of the broad porch, over which the woodbine clambers, you get a pleasant view of prosperous country beauty.

Within, the house is filled with mementos of Mr. Palmer's childhood. The little chair, the trundle-bed, the old-fashioned toys occupy the places of power, together with the carefully preserved handiwork of his venerated mother. The floors are covered with rag carpet which time has dulled to a tender gray. Grandmother's braided rugs protect the carpets and chintz curtains shade the windows. In the parlor old secretaries and bookcases hold old books and relics, while the antiquated furniture is polished as only our old grandmothers could do it. The straight-backed chairs are adorned with patch-work cushions, and from cords fastened across the raftered ceiling are hung hanks of yarn such as were spun by the good wife's busy hand. In the dining-room a venerable four-poster, valanced and covered with a patchwork quilt, shares the room with the large dining-table. The dash churn and a spinning-wheel, innocent of ribbons or gilding, stand by the hearth. On a shelf rests the well-scoured brass kettle in which were compounded all manner of jams and conserves, while fragrant and pungent herbs droop from the ceiling. Antique furniture fills the upper rooms, where ingeniously constructed trap-doors open to hiding-places in case of Indian attack. All through the house is carried out the same thought of the past, and the visitor unconsciously expects to meet some white-capped dame walking with stately dignity through the rooms or greet a rosy-cheeked Ruth or Priscilla hastening backward or forward to the music of the hurrying wheel. But the house, withal so homely, has yet that air of beauty and luxury which only wealth and good taste can give.

Near to the house is a wood of some extent, where a great amount of ingenuity has been exercised. It is as nature made it except for drives that have been cleared through it and made to cross and recross in such a labyrinthine style that the puzzled traveler would be lost but for the many signboards nailed to the trees. By their aid he passes from Surprise avenue to Sassafras lane, from Sylvan avenue to the bower where Senator Palmer has entertained many distinguished guests, who, coming expecting little, have had indifference turned to admiration. One of the features of the lawn is the group of trees planted by Senators who have visited the farm. Among the names of those who have performed the task are some of the most notable of American statesmen.

Jersey avenue leads from the woods to the barns and offices of the farm. The farm has 700 acres, and is in a perfect state of cultivation. If the house is antiquated, all the agricultural operations are carried on with the latest improvements and conveniences. The stables are filled with noble Percheron horses, about 150 in all. Even those that are employed in daily work seem to disdain the earth they tread. The animals in the sale stables are types of massive power and beauty, from the snow-white Anchovie, who for thirty years has been the pride of the farm, to the latest addition, Fenelon, whose jetty form seems a fit dwelling-place for some hero of the Valhalla.

On the farm there is a large herd of Jersey cows, who graze quietly indifferent to the fact that theirs is a long pedigree, and that to possess them means a small fortune; equally careless, too, that Mrs. Palmer should pass them by to lavish her attention upon the common red cow which is her special pet.

Speculators cast covetous eyes upon this property, and so many inducements are offered Mr. Palmer to part with it. One syndicate offered a million for it, but was refused.

"I almost parted with it a short time ago," said Mr. Palmer to a friend, "but I am thankful ever since that I did not, for then I would have been left without a hobby."

Not in the Line of Election.

We do not hear much of the religious views or denominational predilections of men in political life, but as a matter of fact those views and predilections are often very pronounced, albeit with statesmen who are not pillars of the church nor even sleepers in it.

Senator Vance, of North Carolina, unquestionably the champion story teller of the Senate, has a broad stripe of Calvinism down his back, though he is not a communicant in the church. It is told of him that riding along in Buncombe County one day he overtook a darky, with whom he thought to have "a little fun."

"Uncle," said the Governor, "are you going to church?"

"No sah, not ezactly. I'm gwine back from church."

"You're a Baptist, I reckon, now, ain't you?"

"No, sah. I ain't no Baptist, do most of de bredern and sisters about here has been under de water."

"Methodist, then?"

"No, sah. I ain't no Mefodis nuther."

"Campbellite?"

"No, sah, I can't erragate to myself de Camelite way of thinkin'."

"Well, what in the name of goodness are you, then?" rejoined the Governor, remembering the narrow range of choice in religions among the North Carolina negroes.

"Well, de fac' is, sah, my old marster was a Reformed of de Cross in de Presbyterian Church and I was fetch up to dat faith."

"What! You don't mean it? Why, that is my church."

The negro making no comment on this announcement, Governor Vance went at him again:

"And do you believe in all of the Presbyterian creed?"

"Yes, sah, dat I does."

"Do you believe in the doctrine of predestination?"

"I dunno dat I recognize de name, sah."

"Why, do you believe that if a man is elected to be saved he will be saved and that if he is elected to be damned he will be damned?"

"Oh, yes, boss, I believe dat. It's gospel talk, dat is."

"Well, now, take my case. Do you believe that I am elected to be saved?"

The old man struggled for a minute with his desire to be respectful and polite, and then shook his head dubiously.

"Come, now, answer my question," pressed the Governor. "What do you say?"

"Well, I tell you what 'tis, Marse Zeb: Ise been libin' in dis byah world nigh on sixty years, and I nebber yit hyard of any man bein' 'lected 'dout he was a candidate."—Mercury.

Mock Battles in the Sixteenth Century.

Grand army maneuvers are not a modern institution in central Europe. Already in the sixteenth century small German states got their militia into camp at irregular intervals and gave them instructions in the work of the battlefield. Such maneuvers were comparatively frequent in Nassau-Dillenburg and the Pfalz and in many little Protestant states during the Dutch-Spanish wars. The greatest maneuvers of the old days, however, were held in France in 1698 in the vicinity of Compiegne under the command of Marshal Boufflers. Saint-Simon described them at length. The army of 60,000 men was assembled that the young Duke of Burgundy might have an object lesson in the art of war. The whole camp was, however, one big carousal. The Commander-in-chief, says Saint-Simon, "set the whole world in amazement at his pomp and the exquisite luxury of his court feasts." The best of food and wines were served in the officers' quarters to all men of rank who visited the field. A little city of palaces was erected for the maneuvers, and everybody except the privates lived as luxuriously as he could in Paris. As there were then no military attaches of foreign legations the ambassadors themselves were entertained by the Commander-in-chief. On the door of every prince and French cardinal was the inscription, "For —;" on the door of every other guest, however, only the name of the occupant of the house, without a preceding "for." This slight was very near to causing real war, as the ambassadors protested against the slight involved in the omission of the preposition. Barrels of ink and reams of paper were wasted in the controversy over the door signs, but the King persisted that ordinary persons in camp must do without "for" on their doors. In the presence of the King, who appeared at camp with Mme. de Maintenon, several sham fights were conducted in open field, and there was even a sham attack on Compiegne. Boufflers received from the King eventually 100,000 livres as indemnification for his expenditure at the great carousal during the maneuvers, but this sum covered but a small part of the Marshal's personal expenses in the Sybaritic encampment.

Wound by the Sun.

A clock is to be seen at Brussels which comes as near to being perpetual motion machine as is likely ever to be invented, for the sun does the winding. The method by which it works is described in the Optician.

A shaft exposed to the solar rays causes an up draft of air, which sets a fan in motion. The fan acts upon a mechanism which raises the weight of the clock until it reaches the top, and then puts a break on the fan till the weight has gone down a little, when the fan is again liberated, and proceeds to act as before.

As long as the sun shines frequently enough, and the machinery does not wear out, the clock will keep going.

Population of India.

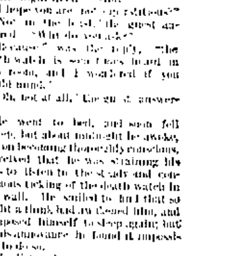

The last Indian census shows that in the last ten years the natural growth of India's population has been 27,500,000. The population now numbers 285,000,000. One can hardly appreciate what these figures mean except by comparison. India contains more people than all Europe, exclusive of Russia. Its provinces are as populous as great European states. Bengal contains a population larger than that of the United States and all British North America, and fully one-fifth of the entire human race lives upon this little peninsula jutting out from the coast of Asia into the Indian Ocean.

WITH AN UNSEEN POWER.

A Trick Upon Which It Is Safe to Lay a Wager Every Time.

On a dry day rub with a brush or with the hand, a thin piece of paper; it will become electrified. In a short time it will adhere to your hand, your sleeve or your coat as if it were glued on, and you will not be able to get rid of it.

Electrify, in the same manner, a thick piece of paper—a postal card, for example—and you will see that, as with sealing wax, glass, sulphur or resin, this card can attract light bodies—small pieces of cork, etc. Balance a cane on the back of a chair and wager anyone in the audience that you will make it fall without touching it, blowing on it or moving the chair.

All you need to do, according to the Churchman, is to dry the card well before the fire, rub it vigorously with your sleeve and put it close to one end of the cane, which will follow it as iron follows a magnet, until, having lost its equilibrium, the cane will fall to the floor.

What's in a Name?

The physician in charge of an insane asylum in Ohio prescribed a large dose of castor oil for one of the inmates, a man of great strength and wild, unmanageable temper. The attendant who had been commissioned to administer the nauseous dose foresaw that he was likely to find the task more or less difficult, and therefore took with him several assistants. On reaching the lunatic's cell, the attendant put on a matter-of-fact air, and, cup in hand, stepped inside the door. The madman divined his purpose instantly, and rushed furiously upon him. The assistants were too quick for him, however, and, after a severe struggle, threw him down and attempted to pinion his arms. The man fought like a tiger, but found himself overmatched. Suddenly he became perfectly quiet, and, putting his hand to his mouth, said in a whisper to the chief attendant, "Call it oysters." The attendant was a man of great natural shrewdness, as dealers with the insane need to be, and at once understood the lunatic's meaning. Directing the wondering assistants to release the patient, he took the cup from the shelf on which it had been set, approached the crazy man, and said in a tone of ceremonious politeness: "Good-morning, Mr. Smith; will you try this dish of very fine oysters?" The lunatic smiled pleasantly, returned the bow with one still lower, and answered: "Thank you very much; you are very kind." So saying, he took the cup and drained it with every appearance of the deepest satisfaction. "Ah," said he, as he finished the dose and smacked his lips, "those are, indeed, fine—the finest oysters I have ever tasted." He had saved his self-respect and had taught his keepers an excellent lesson in their own line.

Expert Counterfeiting.

Perhaps the most surprising curiosities in the treasury scrap-book are proofs of certain plates which appear to have had their surfaces scratched and battered to the utmost possible extent. The plates were those of the famous 7.30 bonds, executed by Chas. H. Smith and printed by Chas. Brockway, which were the occasion of a great lawsuit against the Government. Such works of art were they that no question of their genuineness was raised until Jay Cooke & Co. forwarded $84,000 worth of them to the treasury here for redemption. Although Mr. Casilear declared them counterfeits, it was claimed that they must have been printed from the original plates made by the treasury, and on the strength of that assumption suit was brought by Jay Cooke & Co. against the Government. The cause was lost by the plaintiffs, however.

Smith was undoubtedly the most remarkable forger that ever lived. For twenty years, while leading a life of the utmost apparent respectability, he produced counterfeit after counterfeit of the most marvelous character, both of notes and bonds, from $50 to $1,000. Probably not less than $1,000,000 of imitation money of his manufacture found its way into circulation. It was only through the discovery of his association with the notorious plate printer, Brockway, himself a marvelous expert in his line, that Smith was arrested in 1881 at No. 42 Herkimer street, Brooklyn. Thus was broken up one of the most dangerous combinations against the national finances that have ever existed. Smith and Brockway did all they could to give evidence against one another, each for the sake of securing his own immunity from punishment, after the manner of counterfeiters, who invariably, when they are caught, turn traitors to their comrades.—Washington Letter.

Driver Ants.

There are certain ants that show wonderful intelligence, and the "driver ants" not only build boats but launch them, too; only these boats are formed of their own bodies. They are called "drivers" because of their ferocity. Nothing can stand before the attacks of these little creatures. Large pythons have been killed by them in a single night, while chickens, lizards, and other animals in Western Africa flee from them in terror. To protect themselves from the heat, they erect arches under which numerous armies of them pass in safety. Sometimes the arch is made of grass and earth gummed together by some secretion, and again it is formed by the bodies of the larger ants, which hold themselves together by their strong nippers, while the workers pass under them. At certain times of the year, freshets overflow the country inhabited by the "drivers," and it is then that these ants go to sea. The rain comes suddenly, and the walls of their houses are broken in by the flood, but instead of coming to the surface in scattered hundreds, and being swept off to destruction, out of the ruins rises a black ball that rides safely on the water and drifts away. At the first warning of danger, the little creatures run together, and form a solid ball of ants, the weaker in the center; often this ball is larger than a common base-ball; and in this way they float about until their

The Death-Watch.

"The old [illegible] the 'death-watch' [illegible] with the [illegible] that the sound [illegible] There are still [illegible] enough to [illegible] A gentleman who [illegible] superstition went to pass the night at the house of a friend in the country, and when he was shown to his chamber for the night his host said:

"I hope you are not superstitious?"

"Not in the least," the guest answered. "Why do you ask?"

"Because," was the reply, "the death-watch is sometimes heard in this room, and I wondered if you would mind."

"Oh, not at all," the guest answered.

He went to bed, and soon fell asleep, but about midnight he awoke, and on becoming thoroughly conscious, perceived that he was straining his ears to listen to the steady and continuous ticking of the death-watch in the wall. He smiled to find that so slight a thing had awakened him, and composed himself to sleep again; but to his annoyance he found it impossible to do so.

He listened to the sound of the death-watch with an indefinable but constantly increasing uneasiness, and when, after a time, he heard the distant howl of a dog, he was surprised and not a little disgusted to find his heart beating with unnatural rapidity.

The gentleman lay awake for the remainder of the night, uneasy, disconcerted, and vainly endeavoring to reason himself into a saner frame of mind. He rose in the morning thoroughly worn out.

"You do not look as if you had slept well," the host said. "I hope the death-watch did not keep you awake."

"It did, though," the guest answered. "I heard it all night long."

"Well, I am very sorry," the host said, "but the masons are coming this morning to fix it."

"To fix what?" the other asked.

"Why, the noise is made by a tiny leak in the side of the reservoir for rain-water. It is just outside the wall of your room on the terrace, you know; and the water falling, a drop at a time, makes that sound of a death-watch."

The guest said no more, but he declares that it is beyond the power of any mysterious noise in the wall to keep him awake another night.

A Woman's Memory.

"Memory, the warder of the brain," says Shakspeare, but with many it would seem that the full meaning of the aphorism is sadly lost. Almost everyone has some sort of a memory, good, bad or indifferent, as the case may be, but one person out of every fifty has some process or other intended to aid their memory, hoping in time to be able to retain in mind all matters worthy of retention.

This recalls to a writer in the Kansas City Times a story told of a young lady friend, who has lately taken up the fad of "memory brushing." She confided in a gentleman acquaintance that she was poor at dates, a sad failure on place and weak on events.

"How may I learn to retain things in my mind as they should be?" she exclaimed, as if in disgust at her intellectual shortcomings.

"Oh, that is easy," replied he, "as all you have to do in each case is to form some little couplet with anything you wish to remember and you will never forget it."

"Explain," she said.

"For instance," the gentleman replied,

"In fourteen hundred and ninety-two Columbus sailed the ocean blue."

The young lady was in a high state of glee at such a practical and really beautiful manner of aiding memory, and her thanks were profuse.

Time went by—two days, I believe—when the two met again.

"How are you getting on with the couplets?" asked he.

"Capitally!" she exclaimed.

"A pound of candy goes that you don't remember what I told you, verbatim," he banteringly said, and she took the bet on the spot. Then she rattled off the words:

"In fourteen hundred and ninety-three Columbus sailed the deep blue sea."

A Mystified Monkey.

An officer in India gave his tame monkey a lump of sugar inside a corked bottle of such stout glass that it could not well be broken. The monkey was of an inquiring mind, and it nearly killed it. Sometimes, in an impulse of disgust, it would throw the bottle away out of its own reach, and then be distracted until it was given back to it. At others it would sit with a countenance of most intense dejection contemplating the bottled sugar, and then, as if pulling itself together for another effort at solution, would take up the bottle afresh, and gaze into it.

It would tilt it up one way and try to get the sugar out of the neck, and then, suddenly reversing it, try to catch the sweet morsel as it fell out, under the impression that it would capture it by surprise. It kept rapping its teeth against the glass in futile bites, and, warming to the pursuit of the revolving lump, used to tie itself into regular knots round the bottle. Fits of the most ludicrous melancholy would alternate with these spasms of furious calculation, and how the matter would have ended it is impossible to say.

But the monkey one night got away, and took the bottle with it, and it has always been a delight to its former owner to think that whole forests full of monkeys have by this time puzzled themselves into fits over the great problem of bottled sugar. What profound theories those long-tailed philosophers must have evolved! What polemical acrimony that bottle must have provoked! And what a Confucius the original monkey must have become! A single morning with such a self-circle discussing such a matter would surely have satiated even Swift with satire.

In the Olden Time.

The following "Twelve Rules," a copy of which used to hang in every colonial kitchen for the benefit of the household servants, had perhaps a share in forming the sturdy, upright character of which New England is justly proud:

Profane no divine ordinance.
Touch no State matters.
Urge no healths.
Pick no quarrels.
Encourage no vice.
Repeat no grievances.
Reveal no secrets.
Maintain no ill opinions.
Make no comparisons.
Keep no bad company.
Make no long meals.
Lay no wagers.

The Chilian situation is becoming rather interesting.

The dreary month of November will be ushered in tomorrow.

It will be safe for the republicans not to bet on the Ohio election.

Tomorrow will be the first day of the month as well as the first day of the week.

The next synod of the German Lutheran ministers and teachers of Northern Indiana will be held in this city.

The Sentinel is in receipt of a copy of the report of the Utah commission, of which Col. R. S. Robertson, of this city, is a member.

Senator M. S. Quay has brought suit against the Pittsburg Post and other papers for implicating him with Bardsley's crooked financial transactions.

If all the official ballots, printed at public expense, for use at the election next Tuesday in New York city, were pasted end to end, the line of white paper, with the names of candidates, would stretch over fifty miles.

Governor Hovey has appointed the following farmers of this state to represent Indiana at the farmers' congress to be held at Sedalia, Mo., Nov. 10: J. S. Wright, Rockport; James C. Calvert and Gerhard Belter, Vincennes; George W. Alford, Washington; Henry F. Work, New Washington; John Zimmerman, Cannelton; V. K. Officer, Volga; C. B. Faulkner, Holton; Richard A. Fulk, Bloomington; Jacob H. Fleece, North Salem; W. A. Brown, New Castle; W. J. Hilligass, Muncie; J. J. H. Kingsbury, Indianapolis; Jacob Mutz, Shelbyville; James A. Mount, Shannondale; T. J. Mann, Graysville; Isaac N. Custer, Thorntown; Leroy Templeton, Templeton; L. B. Custer, Logansport; W. W. Gillman, Goodland; Hiram Gill, Warren; J. B. Kinner, Huntington; James N. Latta, Haw Patch; Freeman Kelley, Waterloo; W. A. Banks, LaPorte; De Foe Skinner, Valparaiso.

The raiding of the gambling dens in this city should not be periodical: it ought to be constant and continued, and kept up until every one of these vile places of iniquity are swept out of existence. They seem to be allowed to do business the whole year around by the payment of occasional "tolls" in the shape of the fines collected by the officers on the occasion of these raids. If the authorities desire to suppress the gambling places in Fort Wayne, why not raid them every night? Nay, do more than this. Seize there gambling paraphernalia, and let it be burned on the street, and persons arrested made to appear in open court the next day to face the charges against them like other criminals. If this was done gambling could be suppressed in Fort Wayne, but as long as the present method of dealing with them is carried on it never will be. Let the gambler be looked upon as a criminal. Let him be hunted down as such and punished every time he breaks the law. The laws against gambling should be rigidly enforced.

TONIGHT IS HALLOWE'EN.

Hallowe'en, which is celebrated to night the world over, is the night before All Saints Day, a festival in honor of all the saints and angels in heaven, which is celebrated in Roman Catholic and also in the Protestant Episcopal and Lutheran churches.

The observance of Hallowe'en as a time of merry making dates back to the time of the Druids, who held a harvesting festival on that night. When the Druidical faith disappeared many of the people clung to their old customs and superstitions, and celebrated the festival by means of bonfires on hilltops. The Christian church gradually turned this to their own use, so that the Druidical harvest festival became in the Christian calendar the eve of All Saints. Hallow eve, Hallowmas eve, or in Scotland Hallowe'en, is thought to be a night when witches, devils and other mischief makers are abroad on their baneful midnight errands, particularly the fairies are said to hold a grand anniversary.

It is a night that is dear in memory to many older readers, for they will recall as they read this article their boyish pranks of years ago, when it was regarded as a time in which they could perpetrate with impunity all kinds of deeds of general cussedness. The boy of today will not celebrate the night as the boy of a quarter of a half century ago did, but he will be out and in many parts of the city his tricks will be played. The cabbage head will be the principal figure and the familiar "bump" "bump" against the door will disturb the slumbers of many.

But aside from these boyish pranks, many of which should not be indulged in at all, the night is one of social festivities and many Hallowe'en parties and pleasant gatherings will be held in which the hours will be given to innocent amusement.

From its earliest date Hallowe'en has been invested with a peculiar mystic character. It was an almost universal superstition that supernatural influences then have unusual power, that devils, witches and fairies are abroad, that all spirits are free to roam through space and that the spiritual elements in all living humanity can be detached from corporeal restraint and made to read its own future or to reveal to others what fate may have in store for them. The advent of railways, telegraphs and, most of all the newspaper, have done much to clear away these old world superstitions and the school boy of today now laughs at what made his father's hair stand on end. Hallowe'en is now but a religious festival and an occasion for social pleasures.

A SHORT SESSION.

Sixteen Councilmen Meet and Transact a Little Business.

Sixteen of the twenty councilmen met at the municipal chamber last evening and transacted a little business—and only a little, because it was decided to take a recess until next Tuesday evening. Street Commissioner Mungen's pay roll, amounting to $586.59 was allowed with a few other bills. Petitions were read by the clerk as follows:

John Reul and sixty seven others remonstrated against the opening of Lasselle street from Hanna street to John street. Referred to committee on streets and city attorney.

John H. Schweiters and fourteen others remonstrate against the adoption of the city commissioners in the matter of opening up Andrews street. Referred to the committee on streets and city attorney, together with the report of the city commissioners.

P. B. Colerick and six others asked the council to abate the nuisance existing at the end of the Hanna street sewer. Referred to the committee on sewers and street commissioner with power to act.

Louis Griebel and twenty-three others remonstrated against the proposed opening of Third street, for the reason that their property will not be benefitted by said opening. Referred to the committee on streets and city attorney, with the report of the city commissioners in the matter of the opening of Third street.

The contract to pave Griffith street with Trinidad asphalt from the south line of Berry street to the north line of Wayne street at $2.64 per square yard and eighty-eight cents additional for extras was let to Bush & Paul.

IT WAS DELIGHTFUL.

Social and New England Supper at the Plymouth Church.

The ladies of the "West Section" of the Plymouth Congregational church under the leadership of the chairman, Mrs. W. S. Buck, very pleasantly entertained a large company last evening at the New England supper given in the church parlors. This proved to be the most successful social ever given by any one of the "sections." The supper was praised very highly by the guests as being a genuine New England meal—including the historical baked beans and pumpkin pie. About one hundred and fifty people surrounded the well laden tables and highly enjoyed the repast. Special interest was manifested in the candy booth presided over by two young ladies dressed in imitation of Oriental beauties. The candies sold at the booth were made especially for this occasion by Mrs. Ainslie, Mrs. Hudgel, Miss Mills and Miss Buck, and were delicious indeed. The net proceeds of the social, about $40, goes to the building fund for the new church.

Odds and Ends of Interesting Gossip in the Many Different Secret Society Circles.

The Sentinel is largely dependent upon the secretaries of the different secret society organizations for the data upon which the news of this column must be founded and without their aid much that is of interest must be omitted because of the impossibility of securing it from any other source. Therefore those officials are requested to contribute all the news concerning their lodges that they can.

MASONIC.

Darius council, Scottish Rite, will have work next Tuesday evening to confer the 15° and 16°. A great time always accompanies work in the council. The following week both the lodge of Perfection and Darius council will confer grades upon a large class of candidates. The work will last two days and will be known as the fall convocation.

Fort Wayne chapter, R. A. M. will hold a stated meeting next Wednesday evening.

I. O. O. F.

Fort Wayne lodge No. 14 will confer the second degree upon Darwin Myers next Monday evening. This lodge now has 214 members, everyone of whom is anxiously awaiting to occupy the new lodge rooms in the recently erected Odd Fellows' block.

Dr. S. B. Hartman is down on the bills for a little program at a meeting of Fort Wayne encampment, 152, one week from next Friday night. He will wear the Royal Purple.

K. OF P.

Next Monday evening the following candidates will have the first rank conferred upon them in Phoenix lodge, No. 101: William Moore, Harry J. Landman, C. F. Lapole and one other. Last Monday evening Fred Myers, foreman at the Bass foundry, was initiated into Phoenix. When Fred was ushered through the first he was brave and felt so good that he thought he would lock horns with the fighting goat in the second rank. After a long struggle he emerged from the mysterious depths of the rank and concluded that he would wait about two weeks before running the gauntlet of the third. He wanted a rest.

A new section of the endowment rank "Knights of Pythias," has been recently organized by F. N. Arvin, Chicago. This is a branch of the order that every "Knight" should take advantage of, as it is the only Pythian insurance recognized by the supreme lodge. The rank now has 26,000 members, representing $55,000,000 endowment. Any members of the order desiring insurance in the rank can obtain any information desired by calling upon Dr. E. L. Siver, Schmitz block.

Fort Wayne lodge, No. 116, K. of P., meets each Tuesday evening in the Trentman block, and has one of the finest lodge rooms in the state. They are having work every meeting night. Next Tuesday evening Prof. W. Lahr and W. McKee will be instructed in the rank of knight, and H. I. Smith, the attorney, will be initiated into the mysteries of the rank of page. All knights are always welcome to the meetings of this lodge.

A. O. U. W.

Fort Wayne lodge No. 19, the oldest lodge of this order in the city, installed officers at the last meeting. No. 19 is building up nicely and is classed among the very substantial lodges of the state. Two new members will be initiated at the next meeting.

At the last meeting of Summit City lodge No. 35, Wm. Schock and Warren Egle were made members. One new application was read. The members of this lodge are preparing for another campaign that will no doubt outrival the one recently gone through with by them, when they initiated the largest number ever taken into any secret society in the state, in one night.

GOOD TEMPLARS.

Fort Wayne Lodge No. 235 will elect officers next Monday. One week from next Monday the officers will be installed. This lodge has seventy five members in good standing. This is a temperance order.

ORDER OF ELKS.

Secretary Louis Heilbroner says that that the social sessions of this popular organization will begin in November, to last during the winter. The sessions will be held semi-monthly.

KNIGHTS OF GOLDEN EAGLE.

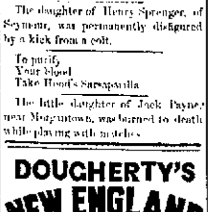

Wayne castle, No. 2, meets every Wednesday evening in hall in the Seidel block. Visiting brothers cordially invited. The castle in this city numbers about 130 and they expect to reach 150 by the end of the year. Fifteen applications for insurance in the death benefit fund in one month is not bad and that is the record of No. 2 for October.

IN A NEW PLAY.

Carl Gardner Will Appear at the Temple Tonight.

The well known singer dialect comedian, Charles A. Gardner will appear at the Masonic Temple tonight in his entirely new romantic comedy, entitled "Captain Karl." It is said to be the best vehicle that this clever artist has ever had, the leading character giving him every opportunity to introduce his many tuneful songs, taking dances and pleasing dialect. Mr. Gardner, as a German dialect comedian stands at the head of his profession and has no equals in this particular line. Besides being a decidedly clever actor, he is possessed of a remarkably sweet singing voice which he uses with fine effect in the many tuneful ballads which he sings throughout the merry play. The company surrounding Mr. Gardner this season is larger and stronger than ever, among whom are the famous Fatherland Tyrolean quartet who have proved such a strong drawing card.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

The Time Set for Holding the Annual Meeting Here.

Ex-County Commissioner J. D. Gloyd, president of the county farmers' institute, has received from State Superintendent W. C. Latta a circular stating that December 9 and 10 are the dates set for holding the institute in this county. The meetings will probably be held in the circuit court room. Institutes will be held at the same time in Wells and Noble counties. The committee composed of one from each township, will meet Saturday, November 7, at 10 a. m. to complete arrangements for the meeting. The institute is held under the auspices of Purdue university and a part of the funds necessary is furnished by the state, an appropriation of $5,000 per annum having been made with which to defray the expense of one institute in each county in the state.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds. I gave it a trial, took in all, eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at Dreier Bros. Drug Store, regular size, 50c and $1.00.

Scrofula

Is more especially than any other a hereditary disease, and for this simple reason: Arising from impure and insufficient blood, the disease locates itself in the lymphatics, which are composed of white tissues; there is a period of fetal life when the whole body consists of white tissues, and therefore the unborn child is especially susceptible to this dreadful disease. But there is a potent remedy for scrofula, whether hereditary or acquired. It is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which expels every trace of the disease and gives to the blood the quality and color of health. Get Hood's.

Entirely Cured My Boy

"When my boy was two years old he was attacked and suffered a long time with scrofula sores. The physician at length told us to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, which we did. Two bottles cured him. He is now 10 years old and has not had any sign of scrofula since. We recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all our friends." Mrs. E. C. Clifford, 5 Elder St., Cleveland, O.

AN OLD YOUNG PERSON

How to Get Old and Young Again.

Overwork broke him down. This applies to thousands of overworked clerks, mechanics, shop girls and others who see themselves growing thin and pale and sallow and find themselves losing their physical strength and vitality. They grow weak, nervous, tire easily, have a dull feeling head, ... lose their appetite, become constipated and miserable. They are rapidly breaking down and should use immediately the great nerve strengthener and blood invigorator, Dr. Greene's Nervura. It will give a clear head, strong and steady nerves, vigorous strength of body, and restore their youthful feelings.

I had indigestion, dyspepsia, palpitation, cold feet and hands, sleepless nights and was very nervous. I used Dr. Greene's Nervura, and now have BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—"Civil Service Gazette." Made simply with boiling water or milk. RAILWAY RUMBLINGS.

Brief Sketch of One of Fort Wayne's Leading Engineers—Local and Personal.

The subject of this sketch, A. J. Yon was born in the city of New Orleans, La., forty three years ago, and is therefore of southern birth and rearing. He is the popular Nickel Plate engineer, and has been their celebrated chairman of the committee of adjustment for the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers for the past ten years. Mr.

Yon has been running an engine some thirteen years, and is widely known throughout the United States and Canada, one of the few men of his calling who have gained a national reputation from coming in contact with representative men of the order. He has represented Fort Wayne Division, No. 12, in the Grand Division, and is acknowledged one of the brightest and most pungent debators. Mr. Yon, during the great "Q" strike, was selected as chairman of the Advisory Board of the Brotherhood, and holds the high and honorable position of chairman of the Board of Adjustment of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of the Vanderbilt system of railroads, which includes every mile of rail they own and operate. He has given much time and attention to the development of the order, and has received marked praise and encomiums from its membership. He has been and is a staunch supporter of its present administration and a warm friend of its grand chief, P. M. Arthur. Mr Yon is an efficient and capable engineer and enjoys the confidence of his employers. He began his career as an engineer in the city of Pittsburg on the Pennsylvania railroad and employed with the Nickel Plate shortly after its present management took charge of the road. During the late fair held by St. Patrick's church a set of cans were voted to the most popular engineer in Fort Wayne. A candidate was selected by the employes of each line running into the city, the Nickel Plate boys selecting Mr. Yon, and by their earnest efforts succeeded in carrying off the prize for their leader.

He is widely known in Fort Wayne and possesses an affable and entertaining manner, is the life of society in which he circulates and is a conversationalist of splendid attainments; being thoroughly posted on the progress of railroads and acquiring a knowledge of economics, he has placed himself among the prominent conservative leaders of the labor orders.

BRIEF MENTION.

The Lake Shore road recently placed an order for thirty-five new engines.

Nickel Plate engine No. 90 has gone into the Stony Island shops for repairs.

Engineer George Moon, of the Nickel Plate, has resumed his run after a brief lay off.

On account of the illness of Mrs. Yon, Engineer A. J. Yon was off duty a few days the past week.

Conductor Durban and Brakeman Schofield, of the Nickel Plate, were off duty a few days this week.

J. R. Edgar has been appointed commercial agent of the Nickel Plate, with headquarters at Milwaukee.

August Sonenberg and William Hilker have taken positions in the Bass works. Both gentlemen are moulders.

The employes of the Southern Pacific road, in all branches of the train service, have instructed the grievance committees to ask the company for an advance in wages.

J. Ryan, a coppersmith in the Pittsburg shops, is on the sick list.

Ed Brookmeyer, of the Bass works, will spend Sunday at Monroeville.

Fireman W. R. Kilgore and R. Fry of the Pittsburg, are sick and off duty.

Fireman G. E. Wagner, of the Grand Rapids and Indiana road, is sick and off duty.

Engineer J. C. Kendall, of the Pittsburg, is off duty, attending to private business.

P. O'Neal, the obliging night clerk at the Pittsburg round house, is attending a funeral today.

T. S. Foley, night caller at the Pittsburg round house, has returned to work after a brief absence.

E. C. Klinehust, the Pittsburg fireman, has recovered from his recent illness and is again at work.

Jacob Baches, the boiler maker, is at Plymouth repairing a damaged engine for the Pennsylvania company.

W. Koehnlein has resigned his position in the Pittsburg boiler shop, and will go south in search of health.

Engineer Theodore Meyers, who was on the sick list, has resumed his position at the throttle of a Nickel Plate engine.

In the big fire at Muncie Wednesday night the Fort Wayne, Cincinnati and Louisville company lost two freight cars.

T. O. Boremus, road foreman of engines for the Lake Shore, with headquarters at Jackson, Mich., was in the city yesterday.

F. A. Young, formerly caller for the Nickel Plate, is now firing on the Michigan Southern. His headquarters are at Elkhart.

Tom Lynch has taken a position as fireman on the Nickel Plate. He is a boilermaker and was formerly employed in the Stony Island shops.

Thomas McNearney is absent from the Pittsburg shops on account of the death of his mother. The young man has the sympathy of his fellow workmen.

The new warehouse of the Anthony Wayne Manufacturing company, on Murray street, will be completed next week. The frame work is already in position.

Frank Quigley, foreman of the Wabash shops at Andrews, will move to Peru to take charge of the new blacksmith shops of the Wabash now being built in that city.

W. H. Upp, travelling auditor for the Lake Erie and Western company, is now on the Fort Wayne branch. He makes this city his headquarters while working in this part of the state.

Governor Hovey and staff have engaged the party car "Mascotte" for the Mexican tour and will be joined at St. Louis by the Spanish club of that city, in the car "Haselmere." They leave Sunday.

Foreman Hugh Hogan, of the Pittsburg machine shop, came home yesterday afternoon from Altoona, Pa. During Mr. Hogan's absence his efficient assistant, George Schnall, looked after affairs in the machine shop.

George McManigal, the seal clerk at the east yards, was attracted to a box car by the cries of an imprisoned tramp last night. The fellow got into the car at some eastern point, to steal a ride, and was locked in. He begged piteously for liberty, and upon being released presented Mr. Manigal with a pocket knife.

The Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen are contemplating removing the headquarters of the organization from Galesburg, Ill., to some more centrally located city. Columbus is making an effort to procure the plum.

A. H. Pullmann has a very lame arm the result of a fall in the Pittsburg depot in Chicago Wednesday night. The wrist is badly sprained and the injury is so painful that he has been unable to sleep since the accident.

Capt. Thos. Wakeman, a Southern Pacific watchman, was killed by a train at Ashland, Cal., yesterday. Captain Wakeman was one of the pioneer railroad men of the country, and was one of the earliest engineers who ever ran out of Chicago.

P. E. Malone is now a full fledged engineer, receiving the promotion yesterday. Pat was one of the most popular firemen on the Pittsburg road and all the passenger engineers speak well of him. Lately, however, he has been firing on a yard engine. His promotion was well deserved and The SENTINEL is glad to make notice of it. Mr. Malone has been assigned to a freight engine.

In his search for news this morning a SENTINEL representative was informed that a robbery had recently been committed upon one of our most prominent machinists. In response to the scribe's inquiry as to the truth of the report the alleged victim said: "I thought I was robbed, but there appears to be some doubt about it. You see one of my eyes is dressed in mourning? Well, it came about in this way. I was walking down Calhoun street, when six masked men came out of an alley and pounced upon me. I was knocked down and robbed of my watch and money, and just as I was getting on my feet again a burly fellow picked up a large stone and was about to crush my head when I awoke, to find myself sitting straddle the bed post. Next morning my eye was encircled by a dark ring, but what caused it is a mystery."

Isaac Goss, of Bunker Hill, was fatally injured by the cars.

Fifty trains pass Goshen daily over the Lake Shore road.

NEARLY a million dollars' worth of bicarbonate of soda was destroyed by a fire in Pennsylvania. The blow falls heavily upon the biscuit-making interests of the country, but unless the baking powder men are seeking to mislead the public, there is plenty of alum to fall back upon.

A GERMAN inventor having made it possible to photograph the interior of the stomach or any other portion of the anatomy it may be necessary to explore, it would be an interesting experiment to investigate the quality and volume of gall possessed by the man that chews tobacco in church.

RUSSIA and Germany are setting an excellent example in deputing competent officials to accompany the World's Fair envoys back to America to arrange for space for the exhibits of their respective Governments. It only remains for the other European Governments to follow their example.

therefore square into line. But the public mind was the first to move. [illegible] and it may now be taken as proved that Ripon, Wis., was the place, March 20, 1854, the time, and Mr. A. E. Bovay the man who devised the name.

The Kansas-Nebraska act was passed, but it was soon certain that it would be, and all the northern states were in a ferment. The popular mind had settled down to the belief that the Missouri compromise of 1820 was a sacred compact, even less liable to change or repeal than the constitution itself. The Whig party had been destroyed, as one might say, in the election of 1852, and only the Abolitionists maintained any formidable opposition to the compromise measures. But all the Abolitionists, nearly all the Whigs and a large part of the Democrats earnestly opposed the repeal of the compromise and reopening of the slavery issue.

A call was published in the Ripon Herald, signed by fifty four citizens, of all parties, and a meeting was held in the school house. There was a hard struggle. Old Whigs hated to give up the old party name, and old Democrats hated to affiliate with old Whigs, but the thing was done at last and the name Republican, suggested by Mr. Bovay, was adopted. It was a wise suggestion. The Democrats have always gained much strength by their name. It means something definite and plain to common minds. "Federalist" had long been odious, and to Americans generally "Whig" was meaningless. "Republican" had had a definite and tolerably uniform meaning for 2,500 years, and was the honored title of the party which overthrew the Federalists in 1800 and ruled the United States for twenty four years.

The principal organizers were A. E. Bovay, Jedediah Bowen, A. Loper, A. Thomas and J. Woodruff, three Whigs, one Democrat and one Abolitionist or Free Soiler. These were the committee, but Mr. Bovay was the active man. He was born in Jefferson county, N. Y., July 12, 1818, was graduated from Norwich (Vt.) university in 1841, and located in Ripon in 1850. He was teacher, lawyer and finally soldier, attaining the rank of major in the war for the union. From Ripon the organization was extended through Wisconsin and northern Illinois, and on July 5, 1854, a meeting of representative men at the Tremont House, Chicago, formally adopted the name.

WEALTHY AND PHILANTHROPIC.

A Titled Englishwoman Who Labors for the Benefit of the Poor.

Temperance circles in America are agitated and delighted by the visit of Lady Henry Somerset, president of the British Women's Temperance association and one of the great ladies of England in wealth, rank and talent. Her history is as fascinating as high wrought fiction, doubly fascinating because it is such a plain and pleasant fact.

She is the oldest daughter of the great Earl Somers of Eastnor castle, Herefordshire, and was born in 1851. As she had no brothers she inherited nearly all the vast estate. Eastnor castle is among the most noted seats of the British nobility, and the family have been large landowners in England for 700 years. At the age of twenty-one she was married to Lord Henry Somerset, second son of the Duke of Beaufort. With youth, beauty, rank and immense wealth at command, she grew interested in the poor of England, and was in some manner led to espouse the temperance cause.

As good as new — [illegible] It's a work that isn't finished when you've stopped taking them, either. It's lasting. They cure, as well as relieve. And it's all done so mildly and gently! There's none of the violence that went with the old-time pill. One tiny, sugar-coated Pellet's a gentle laxative — three to four act as a cathartic. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the stomach and bowels, are prevented, relieved and cured. As a Liver Pill, they're unequaled. They're purely vegetable, perfectly harmless — the smallest, cheapest, and easiest to take.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, because they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

You only pay for the good you get. Can you ask more?

The Dull Thudder.

It is evident that there will have to be a national party organized, perhaps a dynamite party, to annihilate the fiends who write for newspapers and particularly use the expression, "dull thud." With these writers anything and everything falls with a dull thud, from the carcass of a man who is hung for crimes to the esthetic and fairy-like maiden who experiments on roller skates. Every day for a month the depraved have continued a "dull thud" or two, and the local writers of the city and country papers have described the falling of more things with "dull thuds" than would fill a box car. The expression originated with a reporter for a paper published in Europe, many centuries ago, in reference to a man who fell off the highest pinnacle of a mountain, and struck several miles below, with a "dull thud." It might have been an appropriate expression at that time, but during the hundreds of years that have passed since the dull thud has been worn so that it creates a smile when the wayfaring man reads about such a fall. The dull thud is almost equal, in annoyance, to the expression always used by new reporters in describing a fire, "the scene beggars description." Many people have been driven to desperation by reading of the dull thud, and a stop should be put to it. Some newspapers make a rule that any person who uses the expression "dull thud" shall be at once discharged, but within a week the managing editor, or the proprietor of the paper will write something editorial, descriptive of a fall, and will unconsciously work in the dull thud, when, of course, the rule is suspended. There is no expression that seems to linger about in the recesses of the brain, ready to come forth unawares, like the dull thud. Dramatic critics, in speaking of some unusual bit of acting, describe the heroine falling, swooning, into the arms of the hero, with a dull thud. [illegible]

Typewriter Champions.

Frank E. McGurrin, of Salt Lake City, claims the championship as the fastest typewriter in the world. He does not glance at the key-board while reading copy. He covers the board with his hands and uses the finger movement, instead of the wrist movement. His record is 12[illegible] words, exclusive of errors, from dictation, in a minute. On a single memorized sentence he wrote at the rate of 150 words in a minute. Miss Orr and Miss Grant, of New York, are the only operators who approach McGurrin in swiftness and accuracy. McGurrin defeated Miss Orr by three words, and was afterward defeated by her. Miss Orr's best record is 93 1-5 words a minute.

Happy Baby!

Because he is healthy. There is no baby comfort but in health. There is no baby beauty but in health.

His comfort is from fat, and most of his beauty. Fat is almost everything to him. That is why babies are fat. It is baby's wealth, his surplus laid by. What he does not need for immediate use he tucks under his velvet skin to cushion him out and keep the hard world from touching him.

This makes curves and dimples. Nature is fond of turning use into beauty.

All life inside; all fat outside. He has nothing to do but to sleep and grow.

You know all this, at least you feel it. When baby is plump you are as happy as he is. Keep him so.

But what if the fat is not there? Poor baby! we must get it there. To lose fat, for a baby, is to lose what belongs to him. Why should the little mortal begin his life with suffering.

Go to your doctor. Don't be dosing your baby when all it needs is a little management.

A little book on careful living, of infinite value, will be sent free if you write for it to Scott & Bowne, Chemists, 132 South 5th Avenue, New York.

A Mistaken Horse.

A horse at Santa Cruz, Cal., the other day mistook his mistress' hat, which was trimmed with oats and clover-blossoms, for a particularly delicious mouthful of green, and he took it all in at one fell swoop. Biliousness. Constipation. Stomach Pains.

"I have been afflicted with biliousness and constipation for fifteen years; first one and then another preparation was suggested to me and tried but to no purpose. At last a friend recommended August Flower. I took it according to directions and its effects were wonderful, relieving me of those disagreeable stomach pains which I had been troubled with so long. About seven years ago I had Bronchitis, which finally drifted into Consumption, so the doctors said, and they had about given me up. I was confined to my bed. One day my husband went for the doctor, but he was not in his office. The druggist sent me a bottle of Piso's Cure for Consumption. I took two doses of it, and was greatly relieved before the doctor came. He told me to continue its use as long as it helped me. I did so, and the result is I am now sound and well—entirely cured of Consumption.—Mrs. P. E. Baker, Harrisburg, Illinois, February 20, 1891.

I have had Catarrh for many years, but never found anything that did me any good until I concluded to try Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. After using it a few times I found great relief, and would not be without it now.—Miss Belle Woodruff, Lawler, Iowa, July 21, 1891.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

THE SECOND DISCOURSE ON OLD WORLD JOURNEYS.

He Finds Confirmation of the Truth of the Scriptures in the Testimony of the Cities and Rivers and Places of Long Ago.

The Tabernacle Pulpit.

Dr. Talmage preached on "Sailing Up the Nile," the second sermon of the series entitled "From the Pyramids to the Acropolis; or, What I Saw in Egypt and Greece Confirmatory of the Scriptures." His text was Ezekiel xxix, 9, "The River Is Mine and I Have Made It."

Aha! This is the River Nile. A brown or yellow or silver cord on which are hung more jewels of thrilling interest than on any river that was ever twisted in the sunshine. It ripples through the book of Ezekiel, and flashes in the books of Deuteronomy and Isaiah and Zechariah and Nahum, and on its banks stood the mighties of many ages. It was the crystal cradle of Moses, and on its banks Mary, the refugee, carried the infant Jesus. To find the birthplace of this river was the fascination and defeat of expeditions without number.

As we start where the Nile empties into the Mediterranean Sea, we behold a wonderful fulfillment of prophecy. The Nile in very ancient times used to have seven mouths. As the great river approached the sea, it entered the sea at seven different places. Isaiah prophesied, "The Lord shall utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian sea, and shall smite it in the seven streams." The fact is they are all destroyed but two, and Herodotus said these two remaining are artificial. Up the Nile we shall go, part of the way by Egyptian rail train and then by boat, and we shall understand why the Bible gives such prominence to this river, which is the largest river of all the earth with one exception.

But before we board the train we must take a look at Alexandria. It was founded by Alexander the Great, and was once the New York, the Paris, the London of the world. Temples, palaces, fountains, gardens, pillared and efflorescent with all the architectural and Edenic grandeur and sweetness. Apollos, the eloquent, whom in New Testament times some people tried to make a rival to Paul, lived here. [illegible]

A Writer Who Wants to Be Protected from the Woman Who Has Discarded Corsets. Pocket - Money for the Wife. Poor Girls—Court Plaster Dimples. Notes About Woman and Her Ways.

The Woman Who Discards Corsets.

FROM the woman who has discarded her corsets, deliver me! She is of recent date, but she is numerous.

She wears a loosely fitting gown in the street and a "tea gown" in the house.

"I regard health and comfort more than beauty," she tells you. You look at her, behold the result. And you wonder if you will ever regard them in the same degree and pay the same price.

[illegible]

Court Plaster Dimples.

It is possible to make dimples to order. It is now an undisputed fact that to place four strips of court plaster crosswise and to form a little frame to catch in the bits of flesh just where the desired hollow is to be, will produce an attractive dimple. A plaster frame is placed just under the right eye, on each side of the mouth, on each knuckle on the hand and on elbows and just below the shoulders, on the arms and on the shoulders themselves. The feet, too, are dimple-plastered near the ankle. The flesh in each place is caught like a pinch, and the four tiny strips of plaster form a firm hold. For three days the plaster must remain on the appointed spots, and when it is removed the dimples are made securely and will last a fortnight or so. Sometimes a day will suffice for the accomplishment of the beauty spot, though it will not be so lasting as that of the three days' pressure.

A FEW WORDS

'BOUT FINE CLOTHING.

DON'T expect to much from clothing. The best custom work will not last a day longer than OUR BEST, which is really tailor made in the truest sense of the word. Very few merchant tailors turn out as good clothing as you'll find in our fine clothing department ready for immediate wear. What every man should know is that there is good and poor and that the good is the FINE HERE costs but little more than the poor that's everywhere, and not more than half of Merchant Tailors good work. Good clothes look well long after the poor is too mean to wear. You should know that there is lots of poor clothing; yes, and plenty good--HERE. Our offerings today include only the good--the FINE. Throughout the coming week we will hold a special sale of

MENS' FINE CLOTHING.

MEN'S SUITS.	OVERCOATS.
$12, $15, $18, $20, $22.	$12, $15, $18, $20, $22.
That would cost $20 to $35 to have made, and would be no better in any respect.	Cost you made to order $20 to $35. A stock of strictly fine grades that's unequaled anywhere--and more of them than you'll find in any other store here.

Prince Alberts, Cutaways, Sacks and Professional Frocks. Made of fine American Suitings and Best Imported Goods. Clay Worsted, Real Scotches, fine Fancy French Worsteds, Thibet Cheviots, Tricots, the Newest Shades of Brown, Irish Woolens, Homespuns, etc.

THIS IS A TURNIP.

Measures Thirty-One Inches in Circumference and is Juicy.

The Sentinel force will dine on turnip for several days. The genial Asa Turner left one in this office which is perhaps the finest turnip ever grown in Allen county and the fact is not in any other county. It weighs over ten pounds and measures thirty-one inches in circumference. It is solid and very sweet. Mr. Turner selected this prime turnip from one acre of patch upon which he raised over 400 bushels. In an adjoining field he also raised some large pumpkins one of which weighed fifty-six pounds and in his garden was grown a tomato, which weighed over five pounds. Mr. Turner's farm is in Aboite township, along the Wabash railroad one mile south from the city. The soil which produced these wonders fifty years ago was a black muck which a few years ago was covered nearly the entire year by water, but which since the construction of the Little River ditch is now dry enough for any crop.

POLITE.

It pays to be honest and polite, but it doesn't pay to trust the polite merchant. He may tell you a polite lie. If you wish to be happy you must learn to be just deaf enough not to hear some things, and just blind enough not to see others. Knowledge often travels in one deep channel, instead of spreading out in many shallow streams. Best Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Spoons are stamped 1847; Rogers Bros. All other Rogers Brothers without the stamp 1847 are sold cheaper. Decorated American chamber set, 11 pieces, $4.50; English and American dinner set, 108 pieces, $8.50.
